This book presents a unique annotated collection of some 2000 playground games, rhymes, and wordplay of London children. It charts continuity and development in childlore at a time of major social and cultural change and offers a detailed snapshot of changes in the traditions and language of young people. Topics include starting a game, counting out, rhymes, games without songs, singing and chanting, games clapping, skipping, and ball bouncing, games, school rhymes, and parodies, teasing and taunting, traditional belief and practice, traditional wordplay, and a concluding miscellany. Recorded mainly in the 1980s by primary schoolteacher Nigel Kelsey, transcribed verbatim from the children's own words and accompanied by extensive commentaries and annotation, the book sets a wealth of new information in the wider historical and contemporary context of existing studies in Britain, Ireland, and other parts of the English-speaking world. This valuable new resource will open new avenues for research and be of particular interest to folklorists and linguists as well as to those working across the full spectrum of social, cultural, and educational studies.

This book is about Christianity, Islam, Judaism, and how the Arabs and Europeans took these African religious belief systems from ancient Egypt, North Africa, and used them during the Trans-Saharan African slave trade by the Arabs in the name of Allah, and followed by the Transatlantic African slave trade by the Europeans in the name of Jesus to enslave the bodies, minds, and souls of the African race. This book is about the Jesus deception that has been passed on down through history by European historians that is still being taught around the world today. This book takes a provocative, intellectual, scholastic, historical, cultural, and sociological look at the Bible. This book identifies the names
